It was the opinion among some of the leaders of the House at a late hour this afternoon that it would be possible to reach an agreement among the republicans between now and next Monday which will permit the bringing in of a rule to close general debate on the tariff bill and secure an early vote. The rule, it is thought, would contemplate a separate vote on lumber, tea, coffee and of the Field Columbian Museum. Dr. some of the agricultural products. "Waiting for sentiment among the republican state delegation to crystallize." This was the reply of the House leaders today to inquiries as to their plan for closing general debate and proceeding to a vote on the tariff bill, through the means either of a caucus or a rule to be brought in by a committee on rules. · The process of crystallization of sentiment is frequent conferences of the delegation upon the amendments to the bill on which they desired a record vote in the House, and whether they will abide by the decision of a caucus which might decide to lay the bill open to radical amendment. Minnesota, Michigan, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Wisconsin and other western delegations are holding meetings from time to time to try to fram a gen- sults in unraveling many mysteries of Ineral policy upon which the delegations can stand as a unit.

These meetings have thus far disclosed why differences of opinion exist among the individual members of delegations. They have also developed the existence of a fear on the part of many to go into a caucus lest the House organization might tie them to policies which they would have difficulty in satisfactorily explaining to their constituents.

Iowa and Kansas are especially persistent in demanding an increased tax on beer. The republican leaders are very anxious to have assurance of at least a sonable harmony among their delegation before they go into caucus or propose a rule and all efforts today are being bent to ascertain what basis there is for expecting to bring about such a desirable state of affairs. They do not want to disclose the factional differences in the ranks if dis-
